More specifically, the present invention relates to a digital system having a plurality of input/output devices that share a single CPU and memory system. 2. Related Art Data communications in the art typically involve a transmission of digital data from a source to a destination by way of one or more transmission links and a communication network. The data are communicated between two or more entities such as computer systems, terminals, etc. In general, data communications take place in a data channel. Such data channels may take many forms including the ISDN (Integrated Services Digital Network), the dedicated loop, and the ATM (Asynchronous Transfer Mode) which is the type of communication commonly used on the Internet. In a point to point connection, each party to the connection has a data channel connected to the data channel of the other party. Communication on each channel includes the sending of messages, data packets, data frames, etc. from the transmitting party to the receiving party. In some configurations, for example where several point to point connections are multiplexed into a trunk channel, the sending party bcb57fa61b

Just minutes after the election results were finalised, Christine Milne had the keys to a new office and it will become a "home base" for the party to combat climate change. "You win Senate seats on a whim. There are no guarantee that you will hold the Senate seat," she said. "We're very excited about it and we're going to work hard to make sure we make a big mark in the Senate." The Greens

Since 1990, HealthPartners, a large health care system in the Midwest, has sought to improve general internal medicine (GIM) clinics by adding practice-based and patient-based educational interventions and by promoting a practice-based approach to clinical care. The authors conducted a retrospective analysis of two HealthPartners GIM clinics--one in Iowa City, Iowa, and the other in Duluth, Minnesota--during 1992 and 1993. The authors measured the number of new patients seen at the GIM clinics, the proportion of patients presenting with disease-related risk factors, and the proportion of patients with a follow-up visit. In addition, they reviewed physician practice logs to determine adherence to practice guidelines. The number of patients seen per month at the Iowa City clinic increased from a mean of 30 per month in the first quarter to a mean of 51 per month in the second quarter, and the number of patients seen per month at the Duluth clinic increased from a mean of 24 per month in the first quarter to a mean of 31 per month in the second quarter. Compared with patients seen at the Iowa City clinic in 1992, those seen at the Duluth clinic in 1993 had a higher prevalence of risk factors for coronary heart disease, hypertension, obesity, hyperlipidemia, and diabetes, and a lower prevalence of smoking. During 1992-93, physicians at the two clinics more frequently reported compliance with practice guidelines than did physicians at community family practice sites. GIM clinics that successfully improve the management of chronic disease risk factors may have a significant impact on the public health.It took only a few days for Ronda Rousey to become a trending topic on Twitter. On Tuesday, the former UFC women's bantamweight champion tweeted out a photo of herself in a bikini holding a bottle of liquor, with the caption "Yes, I'm #airbrushed." The photo, with which Rousey captioned the tweet, is actually the seventh page of a magazine advertisement for the liquor Thunderbird. The ad features many of the world's top models, including Rousey, and is targeted toward a male audience. One portion of the image has a section that says
