A: Trying several different USB cables, I finally got the network adapter to "stick" again. It took a few days, but I finally figured it out! Yes, your laptop's LAN port is probably fried. Good luck finding a replacement. Welcome to the Piano World Piano Forums Over 2 million posts about pianos, digital pianos, and all types of keyboard instruments Join the World's Largest Community of Piano Lovers (it's free) It's Fun to Play the Piano... Please Pass It On! - I did listen to your audio... Nice selection and some good tips for practice. It's difficult at times to teach beginners all at once, and it's important to keep it simple. - I have a digital piano in my house, which helps me get better at my playing, but I think it's beneficial to learn something from an acoustic piano. It's also beneficial to have an instrument that you can live with, and if you have a student you don't want to force them into a digital piano, or one they can't handle. I can't see myself getting a better handspeed on the piano, but the fact that you're more accurate will help you learn your instruments better. Finally, another thing to consider is that just because you're playing the Piano Metronome doesn't necessarily mean you're learning - You may be practicing in time with the metronome, but your emotional content is missed. I had a friend who was a flautist with a loud reed. He had to learn how to not blow his lungs out when he played because it was so loud he would drown out the rest of the orchestra. In the first lessons he was considered a poor flautist but some time later he improved to where he could be accepted as a flautist in the orchestra. However, he disliked playing the flute, and took to playing it as if it was a lead part to an orchestra. I'm not sure if you are interested in teaching or not, but consider how you would handle a similar situation. Manfred, I'm curious: what made your friend
