TrackMania Nations.Q: If each complex matrix is a sum of Hermitian matrices, then does each Hermitian matrix contain a unitary matrix as a sum of two Hermitian matrices? Let  $M$  be a complex  $n \times n$  matrix. Then the following are equivalent: (a)  $M$  is Hermitian. (b)  $M$  is a sum of Hermitian matrices. (c)  $M$  is a sum of orthogonal projection matrices. (d)  $M$  is a sum of unitary matrices. Is the claim true? Intuitively, it seems to me that the fact that a complex matrix is a sum of Hermitian matrices should imply that it is also a sum of unitary matrices, but I'm not sure. A: If  $u$  is a unitary matrix, then  $u = uu^*$  is the sum of two hermitian matrices. So, if  $x$  is the eigenvector of  $M$  with the largest absolute value,  $u$  is the corresponding unitary matrix.
